

SALSA INFORMATION NETWORK

SALSA serves a large network of "science information-users," not only within the SALSA research community, but also among cooperating and client agencies, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), the news media, and the general public. SALSA has taken the lead in promoting and facilitating information exchange in the San Pedro River Basin, its primary study area, and has fostered a positive image of global-change research on both the US and Mexican side of the Basin. Several management and action agencies, as well as other groups, see SALSA as playing a key role in providing the scientific knowledge they need to resolve critical water and resource management problems in the Basin.

As part of this information effort, the SALSA Coordinator regularly (every one or two weeks) broadcasts a summary of news on SALSA and the San Pedro Basin. The principal purpose of the news summary is to keep SALSA information-users informed of news and opinion related to the hydrology and ecology of the San Pedro Basin. The material is gleaned from various internet sources such as media and institutional websites, extracted from other email broadcasts, or generated by SALSA collaborators and cooperators. The email news summary is broadcast to SALSA researchers, San Pedro Technical Review Committee members, other local agencies and non-governmental organizations (NGOs), and concerned citizens.

Below is a list of the agencies and organizations that are part of the SALSA "information network." Each group represents at least one email recipient, although in most cases there are multiple recipients within each group.
